

Wednesday 22 July 2015 at 2.00pm

Jo Gakonga

Flipping the Classroom

There has been a lot of interest in the notion of the 'flipped classroom' over the past few years. Want to know what it's all about and how you can implement it for English language classes? In this session, I'll take you through the theory and give you lots of practical ideas for how to use it to best advantage with your learners. We'll look at the kind of material you might include, links to useful websites that will make the process easier and things to consider when making your own screencasts.

Bring your own device to get the best out of this practical workshop.

Jo Gakonga has been teaching since 1989 in a range of situations including EFL in Taiwan, the Czech Republic and Australia and ESOL in the UK. She currently works on the MA in ELT programme at Warwick University and is also a CELTA trainer and assessor. She is the co-author of IELTS Foundation and delivers free video based teacher development at www.elt-training.com.